In our 35 years of servicing the world’s greatest Chefs, we’ve certainly seen a lot. We’ve watched as classic restaurants turn into outright legacies, we’ve seen young culinary minds shape the way we think about food. We’ve listened to Chefs tell their stories, and we’ve watched as consumers became more curious about the quality of ingredients. We’ve seen new trends in dining and, perhaps most importantly, we’re more connected than ever before.

Our industry, at its heart, is about community. In times of happiness and success, and in more trying times like today, we are committed to being partners with you. We are a culinary family, and we will be with you every step of the way to ensure we get through this, and we do so stronger than ever.

We will be diligent about finding creative solutions to support you in the coming weeks and months. Shortly, we will be introducing a digital campaign to drive awareness about pick-up and delivery services available to consumers. As consumer behaviors change, we want to change with them to help drive more business to your restaurant. If you are implementing new ways to continue to serve your community, please let us know. We will help spread your message.

This isn’t the first storm we’ve weathered together, and, inevitably, it won’t be our last. We survived 9/11, the great recession, natural disasters, you name it. We’ve withstood it all, and this will be no different. Together, we will emerge from this stronger than ever before.

We are here for you, Chef.
